LARUE TIERS'

Father was Arundius Tiers, born New York City, March 22, 1795.

Mother was Anna Matilda Fennell. - Born Phila Pa - 12-31-1807

Father of Arundius Tiers was John D. Tiers.

Mother of Arundius Tiers was Margaret LaRue.

Father of Anna Matilda Fennell was William Fennell.

Mother of Anna Matilda Fennell was Mary Pratt.

Father of Mary Pratt was Matthew Pratt (Portrait Painter.).

Brother of Mary Pratt, was Henry Pratt (son of Matthew Pratt).

Father of Margaret LaRue was Dr. Samuel LaRue of New York

Mother of Margaret LaRue was Catherine Provost. City.

Father of Catherine Provost was Peter Praa Provost.

Grandfather of Peter Praa Provost was Captain Peter Praa, a Huguenot from Holland and France who came to America on the ship "Moesman" in 1659.

ANNA VAN DYKE TIERS'

Father was Major John Stanley Van Dyke.

Mother was Elizabeth Sands.

Father of John Stanley Van Dyke was Nicholas Van Dyke III who was a member of the Continental Congress and a signer on May 5, 1779, of the "Articles of Confederation", the first constitution of the United States of America. He was a Major of Militia in the Revolutionary War, and was Governor of Delaware for three years.

His son, Nicholas Van Dyke IV was one of the first two United States Senators from Delaware under the new (present) Constitution. Nicholas Van Dyke is buried in Immanuel Protestant Episcopal Churchyard at New Castle, Delaware.

(William Penn first landed in America, on the ship "Welcome", at New Castle, Delaware, on October 27, 1682. New Castle is one of the oldest towns in the United States.)

The home of Great Grandfather Nicholas Van Dyke, called "The Corners" in New Castle, was where La Fayette, in 1824, during his memorable visit to the United States, attended the wedding of Dorcas M. Van Dyke to Charles I. du Pont.

General Washington and many prominent Americans of the period were entertained by Governor Van Dyke in that house, which is now a museum. Here Washington was a guest at the wedding of Ann Van Dyke, daughter of Governor Van Dyke, to Kensey Johns, later Chief Justice of Delaware.

MORE BRANCHES FROM THE TIERS FAMILY TREE

Relating particularly to Mathew Pratt, (Colonial portrait painter, and great-great grandfather of Clarence Van Dyke Tiers); to Henry Pratt and to Lemon Hill Mansion.

MATTHEW PRATT, great-great grandfather of Clarence V. Tiers, Anna Fennell Tiers, Herbert Wilson Tiers, Elizabeth Praa Tiers and Susan Vallance Tiers, was a Colonial portrait painter of Philadelphia. In 1765, while a student at the studio of Benjamin West in London, England, he painted a picture called "The American School", of himself and other American students. ~~He is shown at the easel.~~ This picture is now, 1940, owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. It was loaned to the Carnegie Institute of Art, Pittsburgh, for the annual exhibition (October 24-December 15, 1940). See Carnegie Catalogue 1940, page 50; also Plate 11. (It is the only portrait of Matthew Pratt that I, C. V. Tiers, have seen, although I have two other pictures painted by him.)

HENRY PRATT, son of Matthew Pratt, was the owner of the "Lemon Hill Estate", situated in what is now, 1940, Fairmount Park in Philadelphia, Pa. ~~Lemon Hill was also called "Strawberry Mansion".~~ Because of its historical value it is now, 1940, owned by the City of Philadelphia and it is maintained as a museum.

Henry Pratt was the owner of a fleet of merchant vessels that traveled to many lands, bringing back cargoes of native merchandise. Lemon Hill Mansion and the Lemon Hill Estate on the Schuylkill River derived that odd name from the fact that each Spring one of the Pratt ships brought from some tropical country quantities of lemon trees and other tropical plants which were planted on the Pratt grounds where they thrived only during the hot Summer months.

Henry Pratt's portrait was painted about 1810-1820 by the eminent portrait painter and artist, Thomas Sully, who painted over 2,000 portraits of prominent Americans. Sully painted the picture "Washington Crossing the Delaware," which is now in the Boston Museum.

The Henry Pratt portrait by Sully is owned by Clarence Van Dyke Tiers and is at his home at 520 Seventh Street, Oakmont, Pa.

Three of the Sully pictures were exhibited at the Carnegie Institute October 24-December 15, 1940. (See Carnegie Catalogue, pages 109-110-111, and plate 27.) One of these, "The Boy with the Torn Hat", oil on wood, 19 inches by 14½ inches, loaned by the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, is one of his best pictures, and is truly wonderful.

Anna Matilda Fennell, niece of Henry Pratt, granddaughter of Matthew Pratt, grandmother of Clarence V. Tiers, and his brother and sisters, and great-grandmother of Alice Tiers Messler, Eleanor Tiers Quelch, and Dorothy Tiers Jones, was married to Arundius Tiers, father of La Rue Tiers, at Lemon Hill Mansion on May 29, 1820.

News Clipping from "Paulsons Advertiser" of Feb. 16, 1831

(Copied from the original by Alice Tiers Messler)

LEMON HILL, the estate of Henry Pratt, a garden so creditable to the owner and to Philadelphia, is kept in perfect order at great expense. Few strangers omit paying it a visit, through the liberality of the proprietor. The greenhouses are 220 feet long by 16 feet broad, exhibiting the finest range of glass for the preservation of plants on this continent, and in them are to be found the rarest productions of every clime.

There are some pretty bowers, summer houses, grottoes and fish ponds in this garden—the latter well stored with gold and silver fish. The mansion house is capacious and modern and the prospects on all sides extremely beautiful. In landscape gardening, water and wood are indispensable for picturesque effect, and here they are found in just proportions, with hill and lawn and buildings of architectural beauty. The whole scene is cheerfully animated by the brisk commerce of the river, and constant movement in the busy neighborhood of Fairmont.

An engine for raising water to the plant houses is sometimes put in operation. Mr. Pratt placed it here at a cost of $3,000. The vegetable garden is well kept and is of suitable size. For many years the chief gardener was assisted by eleven or twelve laborers; he now employs only six, probably owing to the finished condition of the grounds. The whole plot may contain about twenty acres. Mr. Pratt has owned it for thirty years or more.
